Capacity and Capability of NEWCO PROJECTS

North Eastern Welding Co. Pty Ltd, trading as NEWCO Projects, is a family operated steel, aluminium and stainless steel fabrication company. NEWCO was founded in 1954 by Ron James OAM (Dec) and is now owned and operated by his son Jeff James.

The business was located in Brunswick for many years before relocating to its current address in Thomastown in early 2000. The relocation was brought about by the need to upgrade facilities and increase capacity to match the increase demand in work. Only recently, Newco has doubled its crane capacity to 10 tonnes.

NEWCO is committed to fulfilling customer requirements by providing excellent customer service and attention to detail on all work performed, ensuring reliability and high-quality products and services. To maintain this commitment, NEWCO only employs qualified and quality staff. We are proud of our record of never losing a customer that we wanted to keep. Newco has well-established relationships with allied businesses in order to provide a wide-range of services: e.g. galvanizing; powder coating; laser cutting; etc.

We plan our workload to match our capacity. If circumstances call for an increase in capacity we have access to qualified casuals, sub-contractors and other, allied businesses.

NEWCO was recognized as an essential service during the recent COVID-19 lockdowns and continued to operate.

For more than a decade, NEWCO's internal processes have been audited and have been certified according to the requirements of ISO 9001, the international standard for Quality Management Systems. The regular auditing is carried out by SAI Global, a JAS-ANZ certified organisation.

Additionally, we utilize an independent third party to perform internal audits twice per year and to jointly carry out a Management Review.

This ISO 9001 certification provides confidence to our customers that our processes are designed to consistently produce good results. It also means that we use feedback to drive improvements in our business.
